How is an 8-year-old cute little boy with an underactive thyroid able to lose excess weight?

I am the mother of this cute little boy,” Duggu” and I was really very worried because of his excess weight. My son had thyroid problem by birth and that is why his weight kept on increasing. His height was also not up to the mark. Duggu also had lot of digestive complaint, acidity and vomiting tendencies.

I was also worried because now his teeth were not erupting properly. That may be due to undernutrition. One day I saw a video on instagram, in which Dietician Priyanka was sharing some tips on thyroid Dietitian.

I immediately called Dietician Priyanka and shared all my concerns with her. She listened to everything carefully, checked his reports and told me that, due to vitamin D deficiency, his teeth were not developing properly. Vitamin D is very essential for absorption of calcium and that is why his height is not up to the mark and his teeth were not erupting properly.

Although I was giving vitamin D supplements, she told me that our body absorbs very little percentage of those chemical-based supplements and that is why we need to add some natural source of vitamin D. She suggested me to give cod liver oil/ fish oil and 15–20 minutes of sunlight exposure daily. She suggested me to use iodized salt only.

Here I would like to share that most are replacing their regular salt with pink salt, which is not a good idea. Pink salt is not iodized and iodine is an essential mineral for thyroid function. We should all use iodized salt only and salt should always be replaced by the recommendation of a dietitian only.

Duggu also had a lot of digestive complaint, acidity and vomiting tendencies. She told me that he is sensitive to some food items which will be taken care of. After all these discussions, she calculated the fat percentage & muscle mass and planned his diet accordingly.

Within 1 month, his digestion had improved, his acidity & vomiting tendency has reduced a lot. Within 3 months he had lost around 8-10Kg & is feeling more active now.

I really feel that Dietician Priyanka is an expert not only at losing weight but for managing all your health problems. Her blogs and videos are very informative, and I wholeheartedly appreciate her personalized concern. Thank you, Dietitian Priyanka
